Columbus City Attorney Announces Free Community Legal Clinic Series

First clinic will feature Bricker & Eckler, LLP, covering “The Law, Money, and You”

COLUMBUS—Today, Columbus City Attorney Zach Klein announced that his office’s first Community Legal Clinic will take place tomorrow, Tuesday, September 25, 2018, from 6:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m. at the Reeb Avenue Center.

The clinic, entitled “The Law, Money, and You,” will feature a short presentation and professional advice about money management and tips to spend less and save more. After the presentation, the free legal clinic will take place with lawyers from Bricker and Eckler, LLP who will offer advice regarding financial matters, including credit, debt collection, and more.

“It is a priority for us to continue finding ways for the City Attorney’s Office to serve our community,” said Columbus City Attorney Zach Klein. “I want to thank Bricker & Eckler for partnering with us in this first clinic, and look forward to this opportunity to share helpful legal and financial advice with community members.”

These community legal clinics will take place on a quarterly basis featuring rotating topics and partnering law firms. The clinics will continue throughout 2019 in different areas of the city.

City Attorney Zach Klein will open the event with brief remarks.
